TOKYO: Japanese telecom and Internet giant SoftBank has already made a number of investments in different startups in India, and has now said that its investments in the country will top $10 billion in 5-10 years. SoftBank is said to have planned its first $350 million investment in a solar project in India, said Masayoshi Son, CEO.

"We have already invested $2 billion and we are interested in investing more," he said. Son said they are looking at further increasing the pace of investments.

"We also made a first move on solar energy. We are making $350 million investment in first project in solar (in India). We will expand. In next 5-10 years, we will definitely make probably around $10 billion of investments," he said.
